Great Gunpowder Blast.

One of the greatest feats in the blasting of rocks by suppowder which perhaps ever took place north of gland was achieved on the line of the Londonderry and Coleraine Railway at Downhill. The rock was hlasted at the headland known as the "Cove," about a quarter of a mile seaward from Downhill mansionhouse and two hundred yards westward of the " Temnle." On either side of the tunnel, and about half-way rom each end, a large hole, somewhat in the shape of the letter T, was cut out of the solid rock. The innermost part of this aperture, or the head of the letter T as it were, was a chamber twelve feet by thirteen. In this chamber were deposited fifteen hundred weight three quarters of blasting powder, or thirty-one and a half hundred weight in the two. Connected with the powder in each of the chambers were wires communicating with a galvanic battery, which was placed at a distance of twenty-four yards outside the

Beyond the battery again, and in the face of a neighboring cliff, a small cave was hewn out, in which the parties who communicated with the battery could lie down and be safely protected from the effects of the blast. Just as it struck 5 o'clock the loud report of a gun told that all was ready. Precisely at ten minutes after 5 o'clock the outline of the head line was observed to move. In one or two moments more a loud deen rumbling as of thunder, followed by a sharp report, was heard, and then a volume of smoke was seen to rise over the scene of explosion. When all was still again, those who could run hastened to the spot, and on the smoke clearing away there lay, in millions of fragments, the rock which, but a few minutes before, seemed imperishable as the hills.

From data furnished us by Mr. Dugan, of Articlave and by one of the engineers of the line, we made a calculation to the effect that 350,000 cubic feet, or 2,-500 tons, of rock were dislodged by the blast. So soon as the debris is removed, the line will then be clear from Coleraine to Derry, and we expect that in the course of a few weeks more it will be opened for traffic between both places.

Moral and Religious Condition of the Colored Population of the South and Southwest. The following is extracted from a "Narrative of the State of Religion," prepared by the Old School

General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church: We must not fail in a narrative like this to call the attention of the churches to a subject, that, for many reasons not necessary to mention in detail, is now occupying a deep interest in the public mind. We refer to the moral and religious condition of our colored population. Particular reference is had to this matter in many of the reports-especially from the Southtion to the slaves. Several of our ministers devote a great portion of their time and strength in this department of labor, and, there are not wanting many rees, and members in our churches, who have given son itself, the Doctor remarks as follows: themselves to a zeal and a devotion in this self-denying the same religious instruction. We allude to ved these interesting facts, as going to show that both ministers and people in the South have enlisted in this work of labor and love with a most commendable and Burnett stupefied one of the fiercest of his snakes by tion by all who wish the promotion of the real welfare of the African race.
